THE REASON WHY.

The San Francisco Call says: "In the purification of politics which is going on it is much to be hoped that the character of State Legislatures in general will be improved. There is no reason why Legislatures should not average in integrity and intelligence as high as the people. If the people cannot always select their best men they ought not to honor their worst ones. Yet we are forced to the conclusion either that Legislatures are below the average of the people, or that the average is low." It is true in philosophy that a stream does not rise higher than its source. But it is not true in politics that a Legislature is always representative of the people. It is not true, because the worth and intelligence of the people are so largely prostrate before the terrors and power of the bosses. Whatever there is to complain of in the character of legislative representation is due to the fact that the people consent to the few—who are the bosses and their servants—doing that for them which is their solemn duty to do for themselves. Some of the very best communities, where intelligence is broad, the moral tone good, and the public sentiment on general issues sound, send up the weakest representatives, and the sole cause is the neglect of duty on the part of the citizens within party lines. A small ring often rules a large community, and whenever that is true the rule and the representation will be bad. We shall have unrepresentative Legislatures just so long as we permit the unrepresentative class to do the duty of the whole community. Again, legislative rewards are too meager. The thoroughly representative man too often finds that to engage in the contest—made necessary by the methods of the political bosses—he must put at the mercy of unconscionable political gamblers the character of a life-time, and submit himself to humiliations against which an independent nature revolts. The inducement to serve the country is small and the sacrifice great. But the first is not too little, nor the latter too great, if the citizen can be freed from the domination and torture process of political ringmasters. That this will in time come about is certain, for the evil of unrepresentative bodies will presently correct itself—violently, perhaps, as the body throws off by spasmodic action foreign and irritating substances."

AFGHANISTAN COMPLICATIONS.

The foreign news is not conducive to the belief that the Afghanistan difficulty will be adjusted without an arduous struggle. We can set down a great deal of the character of the dispatches to news gatherers' anxiety to outdo, and the disposition to make news sensational. Beneath it all, however, there is an ugly substratum of contention between diplomats that may develop into open rupture of peaceful relations between England and Russia. There can be no question that the former has been timorous. More "back bone," to use an Americanism, would have tended to a clearer understanding, and to lessen the likelihood of war. We are told that Russia has made "new demands," but there is an absence of detail as to their character, that is vexatious. What more could Russia demand than the occupation of Pukhdeh, which England could not even tolerate by reception. Russian diplomats are too sagacious to demand the occupation without restriction of "the debatable zone," nor is it thinkable that they would venture to ask for the Herat post. There are dispatches announcing that it is the intention of Russia to descend upon Herat and seize it at all hazards; but the authority is the expression of an anti-Russian newspaper. Still another story is that the bridges commanding the army route to Herat are demanded by Russia. But this is also unofficial. The most important news that is credited to due authority is that England's Ministry has asked for a war credit, and has renewed its activity in putting the army and navy upon an immediate war footing. This certainly looks as if Gladstone's peace policy is about to give way before the complications of the hour.

LITTLE WOOL.

Before the election we were told a great deal about what the Democrats would do if only they could "get at the books." They have had access to the books all the time—now they have possession. The first "break" in the way of exposition does not "pan out" richly. Thus, before the election if there was one Democratic howl that was louder and kept up with more persistence than another, it was that concerning the enormous surplus in the National treasury. We were told by every Democratic journal that the $150,000,000 of surplus was growing green with the damp of vanity age, and that it had been wrung from an overpaid people. It made no sort of difference that Republians explained that the story was a lie, and that the so-called surplus is no surplus, but that outside of ten or twelve millions the excess is pledged for specific purposes by national action. It will be remembered that the present Vice-President made a campaign speech in Ohio in which he worked off the hundred and fifty million yard with decided effect, and that he coolly ignored the official statement of the United States Treasurer, that in effect flatly denounced him a falsifier. Even since the close of the campaign, Mr. Randall while visiting the South, told the people there that we have $200,000,000 locked up in the Treasury against which there is not a dollar of claim, and that it must be trotted out and set about doing good in the avenues of trade and commerce. But the very first statement of the new Secretary of the Treasury shows that the real surplus in the Treasury is some $12,000,000. After having had possession of the books for month the new Secretary finds nothing that smells of fraud, and all he can do is to adopt a new method of making a monthly debt statement. Only the other day a Democratic rumor was afoot that gross frauds and irregularities had been discovered in the Treasury Department, all chargeable to the late Republican administration. But Secretary Manning and his assistant, Secretary Fairchild, have hastened to declare the story false and to say that there is nothing wrong in the Treasury Department. Really it looks as if those fellows, the Republicans, left something for the Democrats to steal, after all.

THE GENERAL ON THE STREET.

New York, April 21st.—At 4 o'clock this afternoon General Grant left his home and walked down the steps. Behind him was his side, but not touching him. The General walked to the center of Sixty-sixth street and Madison avenue, then turned and walked back. He used to can and walked mostly limping, but now he is walking straight down the street, but that we dare say is pretty well cured by this time. We are their Philadelphia contemporaries of the malady which General Grant is suffering from to make his recovery even more impossible or improbable. What a lot of free advertising Drs. Douglas and Best are giving to the public. The General still further, and recovered. Grant sitting among the doctors in an easy chair, smiling. The following burlesque account, headed "Grant Will Save Them," is also given. The General is determined to call all his doctors through. To call all his doctors through, and show decided improvement.

THE SITUATION CRITICAL.

New York, April 21st.—A Son's Washington special says: "Advises were received here from Guatemala, describing briefly some of their death. The commanding general was captured, and the caudillo of the Commission was captured. The caudillo is a son of a reading of the bodies of two policemen outside the fort, and the party all gone. An Indian told him he had been down the river to Battaford. It would be taken them only two days to reach here."

The Situation at Panama.

Panama, April 21st.—The arrival of the steamer Acapulco places a very strong force of American marines and sailors on the Isthmus. It is expected that the number of this force will be increased as the situation of the two Posts at Granger Hall, THIS EVENING, at 8 o'clock. All commands in good order. The caudillo of the Commission is still there. The letter forwarded to Mr. Vilas, who replied that the charges would be considered as soon as the business of the Department, with proper regard to regular order, will permit, says the General. The caudillo has a son who is a member of the Commission, and he is a son of a reading of the bodies of two policemen outside the fort, and the party all gone. An Indian told him he had been down the river to Battaford. It would be taken them only two days to reach here."

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE

METROPOLITAN THEATER.—"Lights of London" was played again last night in a fine house, and with greater ease and more interest than on the first night. It will be played tonight for the third time. The orchestra last night was strengthened, and under the direction of Mr. Grant was thoroughly good. The company of Mr. Griswold is in the last week of its very successful tour, and the audience will be gratified to the public if the local management could see its way clear to engaging the company for a new season. With some slight additions and changes it could successfully run through a new round of dramas, engaged in a new round of dances at "popular prices," since the public has manifested its appreciation of the experiments of engaging a stock company in which the stockholders are of a national order to absorb the income and force the management to adopt high admission prices, the day of which for financial manœuvres has gone by. No interior has been favored by the management, and the engagements which the local management has secured for Sacramento, and after all that may be said, and all grubbing that may be indulged in, it remains that the Management's management has been successful. A month running before the "outing" season opens, and at that time it might very well conclude its theatrical year with the continuation, during that time, of a series of touring dramas at the new price. For it may be accepted that, from the middle of September next, theatrical ventures here will not be likely to be engaged in with a view to any considerable money patronage.
